

The Reborn Glade

A garden enhancing people's understanding of nature as a whole and cycle, even with its tiny debris.

Origin

People are always amazed by the splendid forest stretching miles away, but easy to ignore or even destroy the glades and fallen trunks in it, which is the breath and regeneration part of a forest. We use the glade to construct and clear up fallen trees for logging, which deserve to be fully understood and protected by us.

As scientific survey shows, one single fallen tree can host hundreds of visible organisms, from fungi, ferns, mosses, higher plants, insects, reptiles, birds to small mammals even. All these work together to enrich the soil and ground cover bio-diversities, which breeds new generations of forests.

Experience Offered

It's a garden to appreciate the smart forest eco-system, also a place to celebrate the reborn of the nature. You enter through forest on a narrow plank walk, then the glade opens you up with a view of falling trunks in motion. Eventually, when you walk through the moss curtain in D Strip, you are in the colorful Reborn Back Garden, which gives you a contrast feeling to the front falling trunk glade. It's also a place to host activities associated to Reborn, e.g. wedding, baptism.

Mood Transaction Woods
Quite, Plank walk, Narrow

Forest and Glade
Vitality, Vertical, Glade, Sun

Withered
Falling trunks, Inanimate, Motion

Micro Decomposition
Sprout, Moss, Mushroom

Boom
Epiphyte, Large fern, Flowering, Colourful

New Forest
Young tree, shrubs

South Elevation

East Elevation

Falling Motion with Geometry

0 1 2 3 4 Metre

Plan

Falling Trunk Glade

Visitors arrive at the scene of an open glade in forest

Steel artistic structures keeping the motion of the trunks' falling down uprising arbor glade

falling trunks

Art & Design
Artistic Holding Structure
Inspiring Spatial Design

Eco-education
Forest Eco-system
Show the reborn process

Reborn Glade

Horticulture
Skilled Epiphyte Plants Composition
Wide range of plants from moss, fern to shrubs and arbors

Spirit
Out-door yoga
Eco-wedding
Reborn baptism

Reborn Garden

Moss curtains hiding the secret reborn garden

Colorful flowers, shrubs and ferns celebrating the reborn moment

moss cover

hanging spanish moss

showy orchids

large ferns