The “INsideOUT Garden” plays with the ideas of discovery and emergence. The subtly arcing path, tall vegetation and gabion structures distort the view for the visitor, blurring their sense of looking in versus out. The tall vegetation and gabion structures work together to create an isolated moment as you walk along the path, feeling almost maze-like. This becomes a fun and playful moment for the visitors. Groups of people are encouraged to hang locks with notes on the gabion structure to create a moment for the visitors to capture delightful memories while at the site. Lights that illuminate from the ground are used to light the phragmites and structures to create a new atmosphere at night.
