DEDALO

One of the traditional elements of the Italian garden, since renaissance, is the maze.

An open-air game for the noblesse, made with walls of shrubbery in a geometric shape, a memory of the myth of the one made to contain the Minotaur in ancient Greece's tales.

DEDALO is a garden to play, a maze to interact with. It's not a traditional maze except for the shape: instead of a compact, evergreen series of walls, common climbing plants surround the paths. The image is a transparent and filtering inside walk, in which visitors can see through the different vertical surfaces and experience a less tense path than in a traditional maze.

The climbing plants belong to Quebec natural flora, and their blooming from late spring transforms the maze in a colourful, changing membrane during the period of the festival. The visitor experience of DEDALO is not just to find the exit, but also to find some episodes that make the path different: from perfumed surfaces to musical walls and stairs to see the maze from above, or to sit.
